

Indus Valley Television Report

Lights, Camera, Action!

You and your partner are about to become TV producers! Your challenge is to write and present a television show all about Indus Valley cities and the buildings in them.

You will need to use what you have learned in the lesson so far and conduct further research to make sure you cover the following items in your report:

1. An introduction to the Indus Valley - where it was located, physical features.
2. Why the river was so important.
3. A description of what an Indus Valley city was like (size, types of buildings, layout).
4. Details about the wells and drainage system in the city.
5. Details about the houses people lived in.

You may choose to act out your own little scenes to bring your information to life and help your viewers gain a deeper understanding, or perhaps you might choose to show pictures or photographs to your viewers instead.
